

Jonathan Lebolt, PhD, LLC - New Consultee Agreement

Welcome! Thank you for thinking of me as your consultant. Please take a few minutes to look over the following before signing.

One of the most important factors in the success of ongoing consultation is the relationship between consultant and consultee. I ask that you agree to the following:

- Please be proactive in bringing up problems that you are having in your work with clients, so that we may discuss them openly. My goal is not to judge you, but to assist you in realizing your full potential as a clinician.
- Please let me know how you think consultation is progressing. Tell me when I am being helpful or unhelpful. Likewise, I will provide you with feedback about your progress.
- When either you or I think it's time to terminate consultation, let's discuss this in person.

Confidentiality: I will treat all identifying information about clients, and any information about your personal history that is relevant to your work with clients, as confidential. I may discuss cases with peers, disguising your and clients' identity, if I think it will help me be more effective in consulting for you.

Payment: I will charge your credit card $260 after each session unless we make other arrangements.

Cancellation policy: I will charge you the full fee for no-shows (missed appointments that you do not cancel).

Teleconsultation: In addition to in-person sessions, I provide teleconsultation via password-protected Zoom. I will email you my Zoom link to click on to start your sessions.

Contact: You may use e-mail or texts to schedule appointments, and I may use them to communicate with you about routine issues such as appointments. You may call or text me if you have a need to discuss a clinical issue between sessions.

Thank you for your cooperation--I look forward to working with you!
